

German learning trip 2015

On 3rd August 2015, a group of 12 students from Despark College travelled to Germany. Germany has firmly established itself as a first rate travel destination, not just for the well-informed few but for the happy-go-lucky crowds of tourists from all over the world too. On the first day, students and trainer visited Porsche and Mercedes-Benz Museum in Stuttgart, Germany. This is the capital city of Germany's automotive industries.

Germany's multitude of regional identities offers a cornucopia of distinct experiences to meet all kinds of expectations and suit all possible tastes (even the most discriminating ones) -We went to the 2nd biggest city in Germany, Munich. The capital city of Bavaria, situated near the foothills of the Alps, with its characteristic ornate architecture, beautiful parks, world-class museums, nearby castles, and its trademark 'beer gardens' is a great place to visit year-round and not just during Oktoberfest.

Munich is a charming city full of remnants of its royal past being neither big nor small - just the right size - it offers a ton of attractions of all kinds within a relatively small area. Munich's whole culture of beer gardens greatly adds to its friendly character. whatever it is you fancy: beautiful scenery, great architecture, lively festivals, glamorous events, exciting nightlife, delicious food and the best beverage ever - Germany has it all and more.

Enumerating all the attractions that make visiting this country worth its while would be a daunting task - the possible reasons are so many and so multifarious that any attempt at shortlisting "the best ones" would smack of presumptuousness and of having an axe to grind.
